Live bats delight at annual meeting

Anita Weier

Folks of all ages enjoyed learning about bats and seeing three of them up close and personal during a program following the annual member meeting Jan 9th at the Warner Park Community Recreation Center. About 150 people, including many young folks, attended the event.

The Bats Live! program about Nature's Nighttime Superheroes was presented by Jennifer Redell, a conservation biologist with the Bat Program of the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources. She stressed the importance of bats, who consume tons of insects nightly as well as pollinating plants. Redell explained the horrendous effects of White-nose Syndrome, which has caused the death of millions of bats in the United States. She warned that bats overwintering in caves or mines must not be disturbed, and said that care must be taken not to spread the fungus that causes the deadly syndrome.

During the annual meeting preceding the bats presentation, Dana Erlandsen summarized Friends' activities during 2015 that included helping fund student visits, sponsoring an eagle's nest in the marsh, assisting construction of a chimney swift house and supporting acquisition of 81 acres upstream from the marsh.

Lesleigh Luttrell presented the treasurer's report showing a year-end balance of $9,364.09. Timothy Baker explained our support for removal of common carp, an invasive species that muddies water and destroys shoreline vegetation. Janet Battista honored founding member Muriel Simms for her long and faithful service on the Board of Directors, and Jim Krause presented a Volunteer Award to Jim Hughes. The Friends gave a special thanks to Russ Hefty for all he has done to restore and educate about the marsh during his career with Madison Parks.

16-unit development proposed

Cherokee Park, Inc. (CPI) has requested permission for a development to be called The Turn at Cherokee, which will consist of 16 homes on 6.2 acres at 5204 N. Sherman Ave, just north of the Cherokee Country Club.

According to the Letter of Intent that CPI has filed with the City of Madison, CPI intends to develop the site with public utilities, streets, and sidewalks in spring of 2016 with individual unit sales and home construction to begin immediately following.

The development plan is consistent with the Cherokee Special Area Plan previously adopted by the Madison Common Council. The City of Madison annexed the project area from the Town of Westport in 2015 and has allocated funds in the 2016 general budget to extend water service to the development area.

We are planning to review the site's stormwater management plan and other details as they become available.

Canoe/kayak launch meeting held

On January 27, Madison Parks and the Engineering Department held a second public information meeting to provide information and receive comments on proposed improvements to the canoe and kayak launch in Cherokee Park. The project is intended to replace the existing, informal launch at Burning Wood Way and Mosinee Ln.

In a change from the previously announced design, Engineering staff is now proposing a basic gravel ramp. In talks with the Department of Natural Resources, Engineering determined that the geocell mats included in the earlier design wouldn't be needed.

The project, first proposed in 2014, has been delayed because Parks would like to move the two existing canoe/kayak storage racks close to the launch site, and some neighbors have opposed moving the racks from their current location at the edge of the developed park to the open area near the launch.

Public comments at the second meeting showed that these concerns remain. Alder Rebecca Kemble is working with city staff to find a solution.

Bluebirds and more found on Christmas bird count

Jan Axelson

Dedicated birders again combed Cherokee Marsh and nearby Northside locations from dawn to dusk on December 19 for the annual Audubon Christmas Bird Count. A core team of Paul Noeldner, Timothy Baker, Jim Hughes, and myself were joined at times by Barb Noeldner, Anka Keuser, Brian Schneider, and Jackson Foote. Feeder watchers Joleen Griffin, Jeanne Mawbey, Steve Lang, and Mike Rewey also helped out.

Some highlights were three red-headed woodpeckers still hanging about in the area where they've nested, two great horned owls, and two northern shrikes. (Shrikes are a gray, black-masked songbird that feeds on other small birds, rodents, and insects.) A small flock of bluebirds presented themselves at the entrance to the South Unit.

Most of the river had frozen the night before, but the river still yielded three bald eagles and a flock of cackling geese, which are similar to, but smaller than, Canada geese. A sunset flock of American robins and a belted kingfisher at Token Creek finished the day. Notable finds by the team covering Yahara Heights Park and areas north were a pileated woodpecker, a Wilson's snipe, and a rough-legged hawk.

Cherokee Marsh had the only red-headed woodpeckers and cackling geese on the count, which covers a 15-mile-diameter circle centered on Madison.

Northern shrikes like to perch in treetops to look for prey.

Thank you to our volunteers!

Thank you to our team of volunteers who helped prepare, set up, and take down our candlelight walk on January 30. Over 200 folks turned out to enjoy the lighted paths.

Thanks to Janet Battista, Barbara Binkert, Andria Blattner, Dana Erlandsen, Judy Gutsch and her crew, Jim Hughes, James Krause, Megan McCormcik, Paul Noeldner, Cathy Spann, and Anita Weier!

Field studies fully funded!

We're excited to announce that due to contributions from the Friends, including targeted donations from our members, the Madison School District will be able to fund transportation to Cherokee Marsh for field studies for all classes who sign up. This is the first time in many years that transportation has been fully funded. A big thanks to all of you who have responded to our call for donations.
